RUSSIANS CHECKED IN 3-DAYS' BATTLE

Tide of Conflict Turns and Oyama Resumes Offensive, Ordering a General Advance on Mukden---Terrific Struggle of 600,000 Men One of Bloodiest in War.

LONDON, Oct. 13—Desperate fighting between the armies of Kuropatkin and Oyama is in progress on the triangular plain in the vicinity of Yen-Tai, between Mukden and Liao-Yang. The fighting has continued without interruption for three days and nights.

The engagement is general, more than 600,000 men fighting on both sides. The losses already have equalled those of the first three days of the fighting at Liao-Yang, and the present battle is expected to exceed that of Liao-Yang in extent, importance and the number of casualties, as it does in the number of men engaged.

DOUGLAS NOTIFIED OF NOMINATION TO-DAY

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS OF MASSACHUSETTS ATTEND CEREMONY IN BROCKTON.

The ceremony of notifying the Hon. William L. Douglas and his colleagues upon the Democratic State ticket of their nomination is taking place to-day at Brockton, the home of the gubernatorial nominee.

The committee on notification assembled in Boston early this forenoon for the short journey to Brockton. It comprised Congressman John E. Thayer, of Worcester; Mayor Patrick A. Collins, of Boston; former Mayor Nathan Matthews, of Boston; former Congressman George Fred Williams, of Dedham; Congressman William S. McNary, of Boston; Congressman John A. Sullivan, of Boston; Congressman John A. Keliher, of Boston; the Hon. James B. Carroll, of Springfield; the Hon. John J. Flaherty, of Gloucester, and the Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, of Boston.

Attached to the train leaving the South Station at 10:52 a special car will await the arrival of the committeemen and other prominent members of the party in the State.

Exercises in Theatre.

Upon their arrival in Brockton lunch will be served at the Hotel Belmont, after which the dignitaries will walk to the City Theatre, a few blocks distant, where the formal notification exercises will begin at 1:30.

Former Alderman George Clarence Thomas will preside, and with brief introductory remarks will present to the gathering Congressman John E. Thayer, of Worcester, who, as chairman of the committee, will make the address of notification.

There will be three responses to the addressing the Hon. William L. Douglas nominee for Governor; the Hon. John C. Crosby, nominee for Lieutenant Governor, and John P. Leehy, nominee for Attorney-General.

Big Crowd to Attend.

The theatre will be open to the public and it is a foregone conclusion that it will be filled to its capacity. Mr. Douglas holds a strong place in the affections of his fellow-citizens of Brockton, and without respect to party affiliations they will give him a strong vote on election day. Their desire to see him when he calls at Brockton accords the nomination from his party has resulted in hundreds of workingmen asking for leave of absence in the great shoe factories.

A special car attached to the 4:20 train from Brockton will return the members of the committee and their guests to Boston this afternoon.

ADVANTAGE WITH THE JAPS.

The advantage is unmistakably with the Japanese. A dispatch was received at Tokio, from Field Marshal Oyama, at 9:30 o'clock this morning, in which the Japanese commander says that operations are progressing favorably. Kuropatkin's southward advance has been checked, and the Japanese have turned the tide of battle against him.

A Tokio dispatch from Oyama's headquarters says the advance on Mukden began Monday morning. Oyama, learning that the Russians were strengthening and reinforcing their left five miles north of Yental, ordered the advance. The entire line began the march, the infantry advancing two or three miles, the artillery following. The Russians, observing this movement, opened an artillery gun duel which continued all day.

JAPS TURN BATTLE TIDE.

It is asserted now that Oyama has ordered a general move of his army on Mukden, and that the Japanese are fighting their way northward. Artillery is playing an important part in the great battle. The Japanese skill with their heavy guns is concededly superior to that of the Russians, and the Jap positions now enable them to use artillery with great advantage.

The terrific deals of heavy guns have been in progress since the preliminary skirmishes on Monday. At times the rest of the heavy field guns can be heard a distance of forty miles. There can be no doubt that Kuropatkin's sudden move to the relief of Port Arthur has met with a disastrous check, the counter attack of the Japs completely altering the war status.

A dispatch from Mukden says that hospital trains are constantly arriving there, loaded with wounded from the field. Peaceful of an advance on Mukden, the wounded troops are being sent further north. A dressing station has been established at the Mukden railway station, where surgeons and nurses give prompt aid to the worst cases before the trains proceed.

RUSSIAN BRIGADE TRAPPED.

A Russian column, consisting of a division of infantry, 2,000 cavalry and two guns, has been cut off, after crossing the Taitse, where it endeavored to turn Kuroki's left. Field Marshal Oyama has notified Tokio that he expects to capture this column.

Pessimism prevails in St. Petersburg where the Czar and his ministers have suppressed Kuropatkin's latest dispatch, recounting reverses. The general staff censors patience, but admits that general Kuropatkin has been unable to make any further advance since his check of Monday, owing to the stubborn resistance of the Japanese. The war office information says that the fighting is of the most desperate character, positions constantly changing hands, and the Russians inflicting and receiving heavy losses.

The battle now in progress undoubtedly will outweigh in importance the sand fight at Liaoyang. For Kuropatkin, victory, partial or complete, is absolutely necessary. Defeat would certainly spell ruin for his military reputation, and probably prove a disaster of the first magnitude to the Russian army. If the Japanese should roll up Kuropatkin's advance now, all hope of an aggressive Russian success in this campaign or of relief of Port Arthur would be useful promise for this year, but Russia anyway now needs a winter campaign and immensely enhanced prestige. Not only for Kuropatkin personally, but for the Russian arms in Manchuria, in the eyes of the Chinese, which is an important factor in the present situation.

The effect also of defeat upon the gallant garrison of Port Arthur, after hopes of relief had been held out, would be most

HASKINS FOR THE SENATE

William H. MacDuffie, who has represented the Berkshire district in the State Senate for two terms, declined at the last minute before the Democratic convention to be a candidate for a third term. It had been taken for granted that he would accept the nomination.

The convention, after some delay, nominated Franklin N. Haskins, of Savoy, for senator; Charles H. Claflin, of Sandisfield, for sheriff; Timothy J. Crowley, of North Adams, for county commissioner, and William P. Smith, of Hinsdale, and John Kevlin, of Williamstown, for associate commissioners.

CAMPBELL THE NOMINEE FOR COURT CLERK

VOTE MADE UNANIMOUS

Francis A. Campbell, of Ward 12, member of the 'var and celebrated as a Harvard baseball player, junior counsel for Congressman John A. Keliher in the contested election case with former Congressman Joseph A. Conry, was nominated for clerk of the Superior Court for Suffolk County, to fill the unexpired term of the late clerk, Joseph A. Willard, at the most important Democratic County Convention held in Suffolk in twenty years.

He received 251 votes as against 144 for the present clerk, Francis P. Ewing, selected six weeks ago by the majority of the Judges of the court.

The Letter Was Read.

The only stir was caused when former Alderman Martin M. Lomasney, representing Candidate Campbell, raised an objection to the reading of a letter from the Boston Bar Association. He was voted down and the letter given to the convention. This in substance stated that it was the sense of the association that the Democratic convention select as a candidate for Clerk of Courts a man who had been identified with the office.

The secretary cast one ballot for Oliver Stevens for District Attorney; Fred H. Seavey, of Winthrop, was nominated for Sheriff.

Vote Was by Wards.

Mr. Lomasney moved that the vote for Clerk of Courts be taken by rollcall by wards, and this was adopted. President Dolan, of ward 5, urged Ewing in a speech of twenty minutes, in which the Charlestown man urged the delegates to heed the votes of the judiciary and of the members of the bar who had endorsed the incumbent of the office, and said that neither party had ever succeeded in successfully ignoring these two elements on the question of county elections.

Senator David I. Walsh, of Ward 12, placed the name of Mr. Campbell before the convention, and said that while the Judges of the Superior Court had named Ewing they did so only temporarily, and to fill in the time until the people could speak in their party conventions for their own choice.

Former Alderman Michael W. Norris, of Ward 13, placed in nomination Alderman Charles H. Slattery, of Ward 14, while former Superintendent of Ferries William F. McClellan, of Ward 1, named Joseph J. Murley, of the same ward. The balloting then proceeded with the various ward organizations, with few exceptions, voting as a unit.

How the Wards Voted.

Mr. Murley got all the East Boston votes, and nothing else. The three Charlestown wards, without a break, cast forty-eight votes for Clerk Ewing. Ward 6 gave its eighteen votes to Campbell, while Ward 7 gave its entire thirteen to Ewing. Wards 8, 9 and 10 voted solidly for Campbell. The Back Bay ward, 11, cast eleven votes for Ewing and one for Campbell. Former Deputy United States Marshal Nathaniel G. Robinson broke from his delegation and voted for Campbell.

Ward 12 voted for Campbell, and then the three South Boston wards came in a solid four for Slattery, giving him thirty-five votes. Malachi L. Jennings, the Ward 13 leader, cast one of his votes for Ewing, Constable William L. Drohan, of the South End, the other. Ward 14 cast one of eighteen to vote for Campbell. Ward 17 put 18 votes and one half for Campbell. Ward 16 gave twenty-nine votes to Campbell, two delegates, John J. Riley, voting for Ewing.

Ward 18, Roxbury, threw its vote in its entire strength of twenty-eight votes. The next ward to be called was Ward 19, Dorchester, but the Brighton district was split, the upper part, cast for Campbell and the seventeen votes against Campbell.

Cushing, Ward 20, went to Campbell's right. Winthrop's delegation of two went to Ewing, while Revere gave Campbell four and his opponent two. When the vote was announced Messrs. Sullivan, Ward 14, Jennings, of 16, and Kelley, of 2, moved to make the nomination unanimous, and the delegates so voted.

disastrous. For all these reasons, General Kuropatkin's friends are convinced that the offensive was taken with open eyes and with a full appreciation of its difficulties and a firm belief that victory would be achieved. On the other hand, some of his enemies are inclined enough to intimate that General Kuropatkin has rashly risked his army, knowing that victory now will ensure his selection as commander-in-chief of both the Manchuria armies.

The extreme Russian left extends to the Taitsu River, where it bends northward to forty miles above Liao-Yang. The line extends to Shalihoboy, on the upper 86th 12, a few miles northwest of the Yentai mines. There is no mention of operations west of the railroad.

OYAMA TELLS OF BIG FIGHT

TOKIO, Oct. 13.—Field Marshal Oyama's report to the Japanese War Office, of the progress of the battle up to the night of Oct. 10, has been made public. It is as follows:

"The enemy, with a body of infantry of considerable strength, is holding an extensive rest at Sanchiatan. A powerful column of the enemy is advancing. It is in the Yenhokien Valley; near Shodaien, a regiment of Russians is fortifying the ridges.

Another body of Russians with artillery has been seen advancing toward Uiper and Lower Lubaitun. A line of embankments east of Benshin was taken by the enemy, as were ridges east of the roadway between Shodaien and Benshin. A small attack, and the next morning, under cover of a raid, the enemy occupied the ridges between Shodaien and Benshin and Shodaien and Sunchiatan. The ridges between Sunchiatan and Benshin, before the right column of the right army, the enemy's artillery is holding the enemy's line, and much fighting is progressing.

"At 11 o'clock this morning the enemy's cavalry attempted to attack our outposts east of Sunchiha, but they were driven back after a hand-to-hand fight. The enemy left numerous killed and retired to the lines of the entrance.

"Reports received up to the evening of Oct. 10 show that the enemy in the vicinity of Benshin appears to have been reinforced, but our troops are holding their position well.

"The centre army reports as follows: 'Our right has taken possession of a line of heights east of Yamentun. Our left reached the ridges east of Huangti and attacked the enemy at Whiten, but was unable to dislodge him up to sundown.

JAPS CAPTURE BRITISH SHIP

TOKIO, Oct. 13.—In an attempt to slip through the blockade of Port Arthur, the British steamship Fuping has been captured by Japanese torpedo boat destroyers, with great quantities of war munitions for the beleaguered fortress.

The Fuping was formerly the Te-Jen Shi; was built in 1894 at Hirth, was of steel, 1,393 tons gross and 1,052 tons net, and was owned by the Chinese Engineering and Mining Company, of Shanghai.

The Fuping was captured with other vessels by Russian agents at Shanghai for the purpose of running the blockade with contraband of war for the fortress. Two of these vessels, the Sidian and the Kuping, have been captured. Another steamship, the Canton, left Shanghai the first week in September on mission and has not been heard of since.

LYNN SUICIDE WAS A DOCTOR

The man who commit.' suicide at the Kirkland House by inhaling illuminating gas has been identified as Clarendon G. Wiley, a graduate of the medical department of the University of Vermont, and until recently of the surgical staff of the Lynn hospital.

Dr. Wiley had just gone into private practice, and it is thought that the cause of suicide was despondency over his inability to build up a good practice.

One of the most peculiar things about Dr. Wiley's death was that he had he put off the dead for another two hours his brother, who is a wealthy resident of Cambridge, Vt., would have arrived and undoubtedly on an end to needless fancies and financial worries.

The dead man was thirty-four years old and single.

TOOK PIN FROM GIRL'S THROAT

Miss Katherine Haffenreffer, the young Jamaica Plain woman who was so successfully operated upon by Fall River doctors, who by the aid of the X-ray removed a pin from her throat, is reported resting comfortably after the operation, and out of danger.

The case of Miss Haffenreffer, who is a sister of Rudolph F. Haffenreffer, of the firm of Haffenreffer & Co., brewers, of this city, is an interesting one surgically. She was playing with a pin, which she held in her mouth, Tuesday, at the family Summer place at Portsmouth, near Fall River.

She was startled by the sudden blare of an automobile and hurried to Fall River, where an immediate X-ray examination showed the offending pin located in the upper part of the patient's throat. It was removed with difficulty.

FAIRBANKS'S SON IS IN YALE CAMPAIGN CLUB

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 13.—Richard Monroe Fairbanks, son of the Republican vice-presidential nominee; Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., of New York, and John T. Roberts, son of the Republican candidate for Governor of Connecticut, are prominent in the organization of a Republican campaign club at Yale.

The club will probably invite some prominent campaign orators to address it. Thomas Shevlin, the Yale athlete, is enrolled as a member.

CONFESSED TO 13 BURGLARIES, POLICE ASSERT

Lee Participated in Many House Breakings, Say Officials, but Little Loot.

The police are looking for the third man implicated, it is said, through the confession of James A. Lee, an electrical machinist, in many safe robberies recently. Lee is said to have accused George F. Adams, arrested in Medford and alleged by detectives to have served three years in prisonment for burglary.

In the prisoner's possession, the police say, was found one of the finest and most complete kits of burglar's tools ever captured. The man who is suspected of making the implements will be given the third degree to-day, it is expected.

Lee lives at No. 2 Silver street, South Boston, and his arrest is due to an investigation conducted for months by Special Officers Burr and Kelly. They say he confessed to having a hand in thirteen of the numerous cases of safe cracking done in Boston within six months. The list of breaks in which he is said to have been implicated is:

August 22—Brooks Brothers, Main street, Charlestown; safe drilled; $100 taken.

August 29—Marshall Brothers, No. 28 Portland Hall square; nothing taken.

September 2—James F. Kimball, No. 37 Fulton street; safe taken.

October 2—Lyons Brothers, No. 697 Atlantic avenue; safe broken; $100 taken.

October 3—Hooker Hill Carriage Company, No. 1 Hooker Hill, Charlestown; safe broken; $100 taken.

When the safe cracking began, the police believed that he work was that of one gang, as the same methods were used in each break. Where the men had been frightened away, the pattern of the tools left behind was alike in every particular.

Information reached the police that Lee was frequently in company with a man known to be an old burglar. He lived with Lee in South Boston. Lee was then under constant surveillance.

The web was woven strongly about the man and Saturday Patrolman Ewell, of the Medford police, captured Adams. Yesterday the police went to his house and waited for hours. He was arrested as he walked up the steps.

When put through the third degree by Chief Watts, he finally confessed everything, the police say. At Lee's home was found one of the finest kits of burglar's tools ever found. It is said Lee designed them himself.

Several times the burglars narrowly escaped capture. At a cattle fair they obtained little of value. The police say the total booty was not more than $500. Of bed job, and called by the police the best in the line of safe cracking performed in Boston in several years, was at the Worcester Cemetery Company, on No. 49 Berkeley street on June 12. Here they got $200. The safe was performed in the very most scientific manner.

Adams was arrested gave the name of George Wilson. The police say he is also known as George Gilbert and Herbert Morse, and of late has been driving a beer wagon in Boston.

GALE WRECKED SHIPS; WASHED HOUSES AWAY

Storm of Unusual Fury Wrought Havoc With Small Craft in Harbors.

Hundreds of vessels along the New England coast are tied up in the harbors and the skippers and shipowners are congratulating themselves that they took the precaution to postpone sailings, as report from points all along the seaboard indicates that the storm that is still raging is of unusual severity.

Owing to the length of time from the first storm indications, almost all coast vessels had time to put into some port, and the loss and damage to shipping is consequently not as great as it would otherwise be.

The unusual high tides and the gale itself, however, with which went, however, with small craft at anchor in harbors. Several ships, also, that did not heed the weather signals were wrecked.

Schooner Breaks Up.

The schooner John C. Smith, which went ashore on Shovelful Shoals off Chatham a week ago, went to pieces in the storm, and the cargo of more than a million laths is a loss.

The schooner Ada G. Stanford, bound from Augusta, Me., to New York, with a load of laths, lost her deck load off Chatham and finally put into port at Vineyard Haven in a leaking condition and full of water.

The schooner Reporter, bound for Boston, went ashore off Portland and is leaking badly. These three are the most serious reports received.

The schooners Arleville H. Perry and John Crockford were disabled off Bridgeport, Conn., and had to be towed into port. Their cargoes were intact, but the vessels were being badly. Several barges this side of New York broke loose from their moorings and went adrift, but no serious damage was done.

Cottages Washed Away.

The tides and storm combined washed away several cottages at points along the coast an made deep breaches into the beach along Cape Cod. The fleet of yachts in Dorchester Bay and vicinity broke from their anchorage and went on lone cruises until captured by crews from the floating life saving stations. There were many narrow escapes from destruction of the boats.

During the day the rain changed to snow. The first of the season, in many places. From practically every point east and northeast of Boston the first gale of great force is reported, with a big drop in the temperature. Gloucester, Mass., reports the wind reached a velocity of 76 miles an hour and Revere Beach the snow was thick enough to sled on, but quickly passed away in the face of the rain.

TWO CHILDREN DEAD; ANOTHER CRITICALLY ILL

Ptomaines Claimed Little Ones of Needham and Scarlet Fever Attacks Third.

With two of her children dead from ptomaine poisoning as the probable result of eating bad fruit, Mrs. Katherine Conell is quarantined in her Needham home battling for the life of another child now at the point of death with scarlet fever.

It was thought at first that the deaths of the two children were caused by eating poisoned grapes that had been bought from a street peddler. Dr. William Mitchell when called diagnosed the cases as ptomaine poisoning. Two little girls died, but the doctor was able to save the life of another little girl. Then he found that Mary, eight years old, was suffering from scarlet fever.

Dr. Mitchell said to-day that there was no question about the death of the children being caused by ptomaine poisoning.

"The children ate some decayed fruit, undoubtedly. They probably ran around in the fields near their home and picked up the poisoned fruit. I do not think the grapes they ate caused death."

"Yes, that fat little boy by the window is Charlie, and his skin is as white as a snow flake, thanks to the Cuticura Remedies. Everybody should know about the Soap and Ointment, and if it is going to help other mothers with sick babies, go ahead and publish what I have told you."

CURED BY CUTICURA.

Now His Skin Is as White as a Snow Flake.

"A terrible rash broke out on Charlie's poor little face and spread to his neck, chest and back. I had never seen anything quite like it before," writes Mrs. Helena Rath of 821 10th Ave., N. Y. City. "The skin rose in little lumps, and matter came out. My baby's skin was hot, and how he did suffer. He would not rest, and night after night I walked the floor with him, weak as I was. Often I had to stop because I felt faint and my back throbbed with pain. But the worst pain of all was to see my poor little boy burning with those nasty sores. At last I was persuaded by a friend across the street to try the Cuticura Remedies. She gave me some Cuticura Ointment— I think the box was about half full—and a piece of Cuticura Soap. I followed the directions, bathing Charlie and putting that nice Ointment on the sores. Little by little, but so surely, Charlie and I both got more peace by day and more sleep by night. The sores were sorry or tried to and went away, and now Charlie is cured completely."

NEW CANON IS MOST SEVERE ON INNOCENT

Rev. Mr. George Sees Indications That Church Will Refuse Divorce Legislation.

THE RITUALISTS FAVOR IT

By the Rev. Albert E. George.

The report of the majority of the Committee on Constitution and Canons was the most interesting subject on Wednesday. The new canon on divorce has been called all sorts of names by its opponents. Probably the term unscriptural is the strongest, and it has been inferred that it presumes to establish a law which even the Scriptures do not sanction. Its defenders have been slow in coming out clearly in defining their position. The chief reason for their severe canon on marriage is because there are so many divorces, and the conservative nature of the House of Deputies will never be captivated by such explanation.

The ritualists are holding in the background when they are known to favor the canon. One of their leaders, the Rev. Talbot Rogers, of Fond-du-lac, a representative of the high, in a good speech, endeavored to justify the passing of the canon. He was arguing, however, for a lost cause.

Every day the convention is drawing away from any possibility of committing itself to the views of Bishop Doane. A compromise of some kind must ensue. The innocent party in a divorce will then have rights and many just locations for remarriage.

To Lessen Divorce.

It is the sense of the House of Deputies not to adopt any policy whereby these rights may be curtailed. The desire of all social reformers is to lessen divorces. But this cannot be done by enforcing the adoption of a canon which fails to maintain the consecrative unions of the House of Deputies.

Twenty-nine persons have spoken upon this question, and this by itself indicates the intense interest awakened by this topic. There is, however, a determined attempt to make that Scriptural passage of doubtful authenticity, and if this can be done through the marginal readings of the Holy Scriptures which have already been presented to the convention, it may, in part, weaken the forcibleness of the argument against the majority report, but there is this strange coincidence, that the ritualists who are defending the new canon are trying to throw discredit upon the authenticity of the ninth verse of the nineteenth chapter of St. Matthew, and thereby placing themselves in line with the conclusions of higher criticism. They are, in other words, trying to gain a point even at the expense of throwing discredit upon a certain passage of Scripture.

Overlook Scripture.

This attitude has been displeasing, though it is done with no lack of appreciation for the Holy Scriptures, yet the ritualists, as a class, have been too conscientious in trying to overlook a passage of Scripture which is apparently diametrically opposite to the majority report. The innocent party, in the case of a divorce on Biblical grounds must receive consideration in the Episcopal church, as a lawyer from the South exclaims: "How can this church legislate to punish an innocent party?"

The rights of an innocent party must be respected. To deprive an innocent party of rights is certain to be the greatest objection to the new canon. If overlooks what the present canon preserves, and consequently, cannot be superseded by any other measure which ignores it.

The Right Rev. Thomas A. Jaggar, D. D., of Southern Ohio, has resigned from the active duties of the Episcopate.

Younger Deaconesses.

The other interesting discussion yesterday was upon the age of deaconesses. This has now been changed from thirty to twenty-three years of age. The Rev. Dr. Huntington desired to keep the age of entrance into this order at thirty years, but on account of the defeat of this proposition in New York City at the diocesan convention, where Dr. W. S. Rainsford accepted the change of age, and on account of acceptance of the same change by the House of Bishops it is lawful for a woman to become a deaconess at twenty-three years of age.

The Diocese of West Missouri has changed its name to Kansas City, and the House of Bishops has concurred with the House of Deputies in this matter.

RUSSIAN SCION DISAPPEARS; SIGNS OF MURDER IN HIS ROOM

STRANGE NEW YORK MYSTERY

Missing Man Was in Financial Difficulties and Had Many Women Friends.

THREE ARRESTS ARE MADE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—New York has also known a more peculiar mystery in one that developed when the police and a large coal staff, a razor and most ...ds clothes in the room of John Tewich, ...alsonkeeper—who said to be a scion ...e noble Russian family, and possibly a ...at of the empire—but of the man himself ...e trace.

It is learned that Tewich's disappearance and the condition of the room ...e known on Sunday, but the facts were ...held until Tuesday.

...he police have arrested the owner of ...e premises, No. 349 East Twenty third ...et, and two other men who lived on the ...e floor of the building. They cannot ...denitely charge them with the crime, for ...e absence of the body there is no positive proof of murder, so they have had to be content to have the men, J. Ross, ...anda Lasser and Joseph Highland, held as ...suspicious persons.

MISSING MAN AND PLAN OF HOUSE.

Photograph of John Tewich, diagram of the flat over the saloon at No. 349 East Twenty-third street, where he is believed to have been slain.

Had Many Women Friends.

Tewich was a young man, with many women friends; he was in difficulties financially, and possibly suicide is the explanation of his death, but that does not eliminate the element of mystery, for it seems hardly likely that a man resolved to kill himself should have cut himself as he was in the pool of blood indicates and then had such uneven.

One theory of the case is that the blood is not the blood of the young Russian, but of somebody else, and that instead of being dead Tewich is still alive and a fugitive.

Forfeited His Birthright.

Tewich is said by these men to have come to this country with considerable money and to have been in business in Philadelphia. He failed to get a start there, and when all his money was gone became a waiter here. Lasser and Highland were also waiters, and so came to know him. Finally Tewich got a little money together again, and with the help of the brewing company opened the place on Twenty-third street.

Lasser is the authority for the standing of Tewich's family. He says the young man ran away from home before he came of age, and so forfeited his birthright.

All three of the men arrested insist they know nothing about the manner of Tewich's death. If he is dead, and the investigation has cast little more light upon that point than upon the place, beginning where the police left off, the search for the missing lessee is to be resumed and has ransacked the premises at No. 349 East Twenty-third street from roof to cellar.

Whether Tewich wounded himself in the room and killed himself elsewhere, or somebody else was killed in that room and the body was made away with, or whether the tragedy was the echo of some nihilistic plot conceived in the missing man's own country, can only be guessed at at present.

LIQUOR FINES REACH $4,000

AUBURN, Me., Oct. 13.—The September term of the Supreme Court has adjourned. About $4,000 was paid to the clerk of courts in liquor fines.

Judge Whitehouse decreed these divorces: Abbie M. Dixon, of Lewiston, from Edward H. Dixon. Marie Ann Durtal, of Lewiston, from Joseph Durtal, of Biancroft, Que.; Iwanis E. Blaisdell, of Auburn, from Mabel D. Blaisdell, of Mechanic Falls. Mabion T. Dunbar, of Auburn, from Laura A. Dunbar, of Auburn; Clara J. Stetson, of East Livermore, from Harry W. Stetson, of East Livermore. Arlettie A. Weaver, of Lewiston, from Daniel B. Weaver, of Washington, Bertha J. Shackley, of Livermore, from Samuel E. Shackley, of Canton.

WHIRLED BY FLYING BELT

WOBURN, Oct. 13.—Gordon Ayer, twenty, who lives with his uncle, Clarence Cole, on No. 25 Chestnut street, had a narrow escape from death.

He is employed at James Kendall's leather factory. While standing on a stepladder trying to throw a belt upon a swiftly revolving pulley, his clothing caught, and he was drawn up and around the shaft, his body being forced with every revolution through a space twelve inches in width.

Fortunately, his clothing yielded to the strain, and as it parted in ribbons from his body, he was dropped to the floor, landing on his feet, unhjured beyond serious bruises.

DELEGATES TO DISCUSS OPEN SHOP TO-DAY

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Several matters of importance that will come before the fourth day's session of the convention of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, holding in Lynn, promise to delay the adjournment of the convention until tomorrow.

The "open shop" proposition will be thoroughly thrashed out to-day, it is expected. Delegate Rufus Wyener of the Boston Cigarmakers' Union has a resolution calling for a one hour's discussion of the question, and he says he regards the problem as the greatest that trades unionism has to meet, that the "open shop" is merely the method by which the opponents of trades unionism hope to successfully crush out the labor movement.

Another resolution to come up to-day calls for opposition to the admission of laborers from the Philippines free of duty. With the duty removed, cigarmakers, he argues, are brought in direct competition with cheap Oriental labor.

Because of the liberal spirit of the delegates toward the Fall River strikers, the resolution granting the president the power of delegating anybody he may wish to attend the Fall River conference, by making speeches or going among the strikers with encouragement, will undoubtedly go through unanimously when it comes up on the floor of the building. They cannot Didn't Bear Union Label.

When Secretary-Treasurer Driscoll announced that he had a communication from the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association, of which Mrs. Mary A. Livermore is the honorary president, he also announced that the letter head did not bear the Allied Printing Trades label on the Typographical Union label. The letter ordered that the letter be filed without action. For the fifth time presidency of the association will be requested to take another label to-day. Albert Labrie, president of Holyoke Central Labor Union, and Miss Mary E. Williams, secretary of the office and Shoe Workers' Union of Brockton, were elected and Andrew J. Peters, of the Eastern Union of Hoisting Engineers. Sixty-two was necessary for a choice.

Pittsfield in the Lead.

The place for holding the next convention now rests between Pittsfield, which received fifty-seven votes, and Lawrence, which received fifty-five votes. New Bedford had two and Milford eight.

The next vice president for the legislative committee three were elected on the first ballot. Edward Gallagher, of No. 103, of Boston, 87; Henry Sterling, of Boston Typographical Union, No. 13, 81; F. W. Sheehan, Brockton Street Car Men, 56; Frank E. Mahoney, of Lawrence Typographical Union, 55; J. A. Farrel, Brockton Central Labor Union, 54; John Barrett, Lowell Firemen's Union, 50, and Harry Joel, Cambridge Central Labor Union, 32.

FLYING WEDGE ROUSES LABOR FOR DOUGLAS

Organization in New Bedford, "Slavery Labor" Conditions Denounced.

CRITICISM OF GOV. BATES

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 13.—The "Flying Wedge," of Fall River, has plunged from that city into New Bedford, swept aside all opposition, made a touchdown and scored a prospective victory for its captain.

The object of the wedge's rush was to create another flying wedge here. A temporary organization was effected amid great enthusiasm, with John E. McBride, of the local Typographical Union, as chairman, and Fred W. Silver, of the Cutters' Union, as secretary. A permanent organization will be made in Weavers' Union Hall on Friday night.

"Even the slaves before the sixties knew when they could depend on," said President Acton of the Central Labor Union and of the Flying Wedge. "But now the white slaves of the North may starve, predict for her a nobler destiny—the mother enthroned among her children, 250,000,000 strong, dominating the world for the good of the world.

"There will be 500,000,000 English speaking people on the North American continent in a short time. 10,000,000 or 12,000,000 of these in Canada, the remainder south of her in the United States. Of course, they will be drawn together, and Britain, with her 50,000,000, will also be drawn to her children some day. It is all coming in good time."

"REGGIE" PUTS PRIZES IN VASE

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 13.—Reginald C. Vanderbilt, in order to have something to show for the fine record his stables made at the recent horse show at Brockton, has had one of his prizes cast into a vase, and a silver vase standing thirty inches high, and beautifully designed and wrought.

On one side will appear the inscription, "Brockton horse show, 1904. Best three horses, any height."

On the other side will appear "Dr. Selwork, Herald, Auxiliarem," the names of the winning horses.

CANADA WILL ANNEX THE U.S., SAYS CARNEGIE

Declares This Is Inevitable, and Adds That England Will Then Control All.

IT IS DESTINY, HE ASSERTS

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 13.—Andrew Carnegie's letter answering F. W. Gien's statement that Mr. Carnegie has promised all the money needed to assist a movement in Quebec for bring about independence as a stepping stone to annexation with the United States, goes considerably beyond the summary.

"I have never favored Canadian independence, says the letter, "on the contrary, I am a rare Imperialist, and have held, and still hold, to the belief that it would be as foolish—I might almost say criminal—for Canada and the United States to remain separate as it would for Scotland to do so.

"Believing Canada makes a change I think it will be her destiny to annex the United States, as Scotland did England, and after this is accomplished the motherland will then be glad to unite with her then united children.

"British Imperialism forecasts for the motherland too mean a destiny as only a member of a small dismal group of race. I predict for her a nobler destiny—the mother enthroned among her children, 250,000,000 strong, dominating the world for the good of the world.

"There will be 500,000,000 English speaking people on the North American continent in a short time. 10,000,000 or 12,000,000 of these in Canada, the remainder south of her in the United States. Of course, they will be drawn together, and Britain, with her 50,000,000, will also be drawn to her children some day. It is all coming in good time."

A POLLUTED CITY RESERVOIR

Makes Prudent People Think of Means to Protect Their Health.

"PERUNA, BY CREATING HEALTHY MUCOUS MEMBRANES, IS A GREAT PRECAUTION AGAINST ACQUIRING DISEASES FROM IMPURE DRINKING WATER."—Dr. S. B. Hartman.

CITY reservoirs furnish the water for the vast multitude of people who constitute the population of our numerous cities.

These waters are liable to be contaminated. Contamination is almost unavoidable.

If the people who drink city water could know what happens to the water they are drinking, they would be more careful.

Many cities furnish water absolutely unfit for drinking.

The dangerous qualities can be removed by boiling the drinking water.

In some cases this is very inconvenient and puts a great burden upon the people. Yet it ought to be done for self-protection.

But, in spite of all precautions, people, especially during the fall months, exposed to the dangers of impure drinking water.

Wherever the exposure is unavoidable the system can be protected in some degree by healthy mucous membranes.

A mucous membrane free from catarrh is said to be liable to be considered almost as an unhealthy mucous membrane.

Indeed it may be doubted whether a perfectly healthy mucous membrane is subject to contaminations of this sort.

At least this point is certain. A healthy mucous membrane perfectly free from catarrh is not liable to become infected as a mucous membrane that is deranged by catarrhal congestion.

The logic of this is that during the months of October every one should take the precaution of cleansing and healing the mucous membranes by the use of Peruna.

A teaspoonful or two of Peruna taken every day during the fall months, when the drinking water is at its worst, is a great preventive against acquiring diseases from impure drinking water.

A few doses of Peruna puts the mucous membranes in right and guards the system against impurities.

If the cities cannot protect the inhabitants from impure drinking water, the inhabitants must protect themselves by keeping the mucous membranes clean and healthy, and entirely free from catarrh. This can only be successfully accomplished by the intelligent use of Peruna.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH A POUND OF CURE.

KEEP THE MUCOUS MEMBRANES HEALTHY.

Should you desire special instructions regarding the use of Peruna write to Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, and he will give you the benefit of his valuable advice gratis.

Contributions to this column should be addressed to the Labor Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN. The editor will be glad to receive and print brief reports of meetings, elections and social gatherings of general interest to union labor.

Business Agent James R. Crozier has been nominated by Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union for the presidency of the international union.

His name was placed before the convention of the international union in Cincinnati September 19, but, as usual, it was necessary for him to receive the indorsement of his own local. A referendum vote for the international officers will be held in a few days throughout the United States and Canada. Mr. Crozier, who was president of the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., which is holding its convention in Lynn, declined to run again for that office.

The "no label" label was indorsed.

ARITRATE DIFFERENCES.

The trouble between the Roblin Construction Company and the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union is being arbitrated by a committee from each side. It is reported that the demand for union lathers in Boston and vicinity is greater than the supply.

The result of the election of international officers will be announced at the next meeting. After a address by Charles Morris, New Enland organizer of the United Hatters of America, the label was indorsed.

PATTERN MAKERS ORGANIZE.

A new union of pattern makers was organized in Worcester the past week by J. W. Sweeney and S. M. Lent, of Boston Pattern Makers' Union. A report was received at last night's meeting from Mr. Sweeney, who is attending the meeting of the International Executive Board in New York.

A committee was appointed to arrange for an old-fashioned New England supper.

STABLEMEN TO DANCE.

Stablemen's Union No. 10,665 has distributed tickets for the second annual ball to be held in Paine Memorial Hall, Appleton street, Tuesday night, December 6.

Thirty-six new members have been admitted to the union. Matters of importance will be considered at next Monday night's meeting.

MOTHER PROUD OF SON, 2ND OF 5 TO DIE FOR COUNTRY

MOTHER OF 5 SONS, 2 DIED FOR COUNTRY

One Lost His Life on the Maine, the Other Was Drowned While Returning From Philippines.

"I am proud of my brave boy who served his country so well, though his death, just after he had been discharged, is terrible grief to me. Five of my six boys enlisted in the army or navy. Tom is the second one to die. William was blown up on the Maine. They were brave lads. If necessary, I would give the other for my country's sake."

With tears in her eyes, Mrs. Mary Gorman, of No. 36 Burnett street, Jamaica Plain, told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter the story of her six sons, five of whom have served Uncle Sam and two of whom have died.

Drowned on His Way Home.

The death of Thomas Gorman is particularly sad, as he was on his way home from the Philippines after five years' enlistment term. He was a private in the hospital corps. All the number known in the brief official dispatch from the Philippines informing the mother that Gorman was drowned on September 19, and that the body was recovered.

Two of Mrs. Gorman's sons are now in the army, one at Fort Preble, Me., the other at Fort Logan, Col. Another son is in the navy and at present is stationed at Norfolk, Va. The sixth son is the home boy and has a profitable position at Franklin Park.

Last Letter to Mother.

The mother's last letter from Thomas Gorman was received in August. In it he spoke of his coming home and of his plans for the future. In one part he said: "I have just returned from a long trip in the mountains, and I was highly recommended for good work and promotion. I have saved all my money and would like to plan to stay at home for the winter."

"Tom was such a good boy," said the mother. "He never touched a drop of liquor in his life, and he didn't even smoke. He sent a written order to the War Department authorizing them to pay me $16 of his pay every month. He enlisted when he was seventeen, easily passing for nineteen. He came home three years ago with his first enlistment was up. He is one of five sons that I have given up to my country. Poor William was blown up in the Maine and he was buried in Cuba, and now Tom's gone and he will be buried in the Philippines."

GREAT POTATO CROP IN MAINE

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 13.—The Maine Farmer presents reports from correspondents in all parts of the State, showing an unusually heavy yield and superior quality of the potato crop in Maine. Rot is quite general where spraying has not been thoroughly done.

Aroostook county reports about the same acreage as last year, the yield heavier, no rot, quality superior and spraying universal. Washington county gives an increase of one to five hundred per cent, and conditions similar to Aroostook. Other sections report more rot. Where spraying has been general the yield is from 275 to 325 bushels per acre of sound and high quality potatoes.

CITY OFFICIALS MUST TESTIFY; FRAUD ALLEGED

Portsmouth, N. H., Asphalt Sensation Brings Big Men Before the Grand Jury.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 13.—Another sensation was sprung in the asphalt contract case here when Sheriff Collis summoned a dozen officials and witnesses in the case to appear before the Grand Jury next Tuesday.

County Solicitor Keller being out West, the summonses were sent out by Attorney General Eastman, and the effect was startling to the people summoned.

These are: City Clerk William E. Pierce, City Messenger William D. Moran, Ex-Street Commissioner Joseph Hett, Alderman R. Clyde Margeson, William L. Conner, Edwin C. Hopworth, John G. Parsons, Frank M. Dennett and Elisha B. Newman, President of the Common Council Arthur J. Rutledge, Councilmen William F. Hoehn, Fred E. Webber, Stanton M. Trenerau and Gardner M. Urch and Messrs. Richman P. Margeson and Samuel J. Carll.

At the hearing held before Judge Stone of the Superior Bench last week, on the petition of August Hett and others, to declare the contract made by the Special Committee of the City Government with the Barber Asphalt Company, to asphalt certain streets in this city, null and void, on the ground of corruption and fraud, some of the witnesses openly charged attempted bribery, and a temporary injunction was granted, staying all payments on the contract until after the October term of court. It is supposed that Attorney-General Eastman acted on the evidence presented.

$40,000 GEM BOUGHT FOR MRS. SULLY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—At the hearing in the bankruptcy proceedings of Daniel J. Sully, it developed from the testimony of Mr. Bogart, of Tiffany & Co., that both Mr. and Mrs. Sully bought goods at the store and had them charged to the account of Mr. Sully. Sales ranging from $1,000 to $50,000 were common; diamond corsages, horseshoe pins and watches were numerous. Two puff boxes at $250 each, a card case at $450 and candelabra at $1,000 were a few of the items purchased by Mrs. Sully.

The witness stated that on February 2, Mr. Sully's daughter came into the store to wait for her father, who, when he arrived, allowed the child to pick out for a present for her mother a $40,000 diamond and emerald corsage ornament and a diamond pendant valued at $18,500.

Mr. Sully asked the clerk when he would have to pay for the articles, and when told there was no hurry about it, answered: "Well, send the bill down when you want the money."

The Tiffany account is $109,000.

FLYING TRAIN JUMPED TRACK

RUTLAND, Vt., Oct. 13.—The southbound flyer over the Rutland Railroad was derailed at Arlington. The entire train, which was running forty miles an hour, left the rails and ran along the roadbed for nearly a quarter of a mile before it stopped.

There were 300 passengers aboard the train, but nobody was injured. The engineer and fireman jumped from their cabs when the train left the rails. During its wild run over the ties the engine struck several freight cars and knocked them over an embankment.

The train now stands with some of the cars on one side of the track and some on the other. The spreading of the rails is thought to have been the cause of the accident.

HARVARD KICKERS ARE ON A SLUMP

BY ROBERT P. KERNAN.
(Captain Harvard, 1902, Eleven.)

The Harvard men may be able to play scorer defensive game than they put up ainst Bates, but they will have to prove ch a thing possible before anyone will lieve it. Outweighing their opponents twenty pounds to a man the Crimson even succeeded in holding Bates below ro for downs during the entire game, d were forced back toward their own al for yard after yard.

If there is not a wonderful improvement tween now and Saturday it will not be question of whether West Point will ore, but how many touchdowns the sol- ers will pile up.

There are three classes of men in any anch of athletics, men who play well, they want to, men who don't play well, d men who can't play well. The men the Harvard team belong to the first ss. By mastering many of the most ficult points of the game, even the sensus of the leading candidates have ved that they possess the making of od men, but the whole squad is having slump usual at this time of year. The en are just beginning to realize that they ve common sense of their own, and are t forced to rely upon the coaches for erything. When they appreciate that mmon sense is the basis of the whole ne, the team will come with a rush.

WEAK AT TACKLING.

In the Bates game the tackling was the eatest weakness. Time and again the emen would charge their opponent, break ough, then watch the runner go by. he backs would either fail to find the m with the ball altogether, or would t their way to him and forget to tackle m. At times some of the men broke fs general rule and did some very good rything, but the cry at present in Cam- dge is defensive work, and lots of it. As usual the offence was much more ef- ctive than the other departments of the me.

nsidering the day and the fact that schols, Hurley, Squires and Montgomery re left out of the lineup, the small score s easily be excused. The only general ticism one could make was that the men n blindly. The runner would often trip over his own men, or run into a crowd when good holes were plainly in sight.

Meier's Good Work.

Ted Meier was called from his position at tackle several times, and given the ball. He ran hard and low, making several very good gains. Mills did some very pretty work at fullback, probably giving the most satisfactory exhibition of the season. He crashed into the Bates line with terrific force, and was always ready to add a few yard when called upon.

Reynolds and Wendell showed great improvement over their past work, and Sperry, who was substituted for Reynolds, played remarkably well during the close of the game. There was more fumbling than usual by all the backs, but the slippery ball undoubtedly accounted for this.

Filley and Shurtleff started the game at ends, and they protected their line very well. Both men were a little slow in getting into most plays, but Filley showed great promise in the open field. Whitman, Leary, Jones and Hall were tried in these positions also. Whitman and Leary did the best work.

Meir did not use his arms and allowed himself to be backed a couple of times, but was much more effective than Carr, who protected the other wing.

Parker Improving.

Parker improved greatly as the game went on, and during the last ten minutes put up an extremely good fight. McPadn, at right guard, and White, at centre, were the weak links in the chain. This was discovered immediately by the Bates men, and they hammered these two men con- tinually. Harvey replaced White in the second half and was a slight improvement.

Noyes and Kernan ran the team well and handled the ball fairly satisfactorily, considering the adverse conditions.

FARRELL AND HIS BATTLE-SCARRED HANDS.

JACK 'TWIN' SULLIVAN BACK AFTER FIGHTING NINE TIMES

Fresh from a successful invasion of the West, Jack (Twin) Sullivan, accompanied by his brother Mike, arrived in town to- day, and immediately called at the Bos- TON AMERICAN office. Although they were rather tired out after their long tour very few traces of the Sullivan freshness looked to be in perfect health. Both have been recently in some gruelling contests but neither bore any mark.

"It's a long trip from Frisco," said Mike- but we didn't mind it very much, as we had each other's company, which is a great measure made the trip seem pleasanter and shorter. We are going back in two weeks, as we are well trained for the next train stunt.

Won Seven; Lost Two.

Jack Twin has been gone from Boston exactly nine months, and since then has been in nine contests, seven of which have resulted in his favor. His two defeats were administered by Jack O'Brien and Kid McCoy, both of whom he hopes to whip good and plenty when he encounters them again.

Since their departure from the Hub hun- dreds of Bostonians have been following every move made by the "Sullies." There has been just as much local interest con- tered in their doings as has been displayed in those of Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons have been doing stunts in the squared cir-

"Twin" Meets McCoy November 22.

Jack is matched to meet Kid McCoy again November 22 at the Los Angeles A. C. This time the Californian boxer, if the referee is impartial, expects to get the de- cision over the Hoosier kid. When they met before, Sullivan says, he was nobbly beaten. Also, he says that both he and Mike claimed up a big pile of money on the side, betting that Jack would stay ten rounds with McCoy.

"If McCoy had me beaten so badly, and my gameness alone permitted me to go the distance, how was it that Tom McCarthy immediately signed us for racing week?" said Jack. "If a fellow is in the ring and has nothing but gameness to fortify him, it will not be long before he is down for the count. If I was so badly beaten, as was given out in the report, why could not the master of Sharkey and others land a knockout, when he had such a space of time to do it? I had him whipped so badly that when I hit McCoy in the stom- ach in the eighteenth round, which doubled him up like a jackknife, Referee Eyton threatened to disqualify me if I hit him so hard again.

Didn't Have a Mark.

"Some of the papers bulletined that I was getting trounced, and Mike expected to find me all shook up, but instead I was without a mark. The only bad blow I got during the mill was a punch which made my nose bleed freely, and this worried me a little bit.

"Jack O'Brien bested me fairly and squarely in three rounds in St. Louis. I really wasn't knocked out, but I was so helpless that I wasn't able to stand on my feet. Four days before I met O'Brien I won a twenty-round victory over Hugo Kelly in Kansas City. The long trip in the train and the hard bout with Kelly made me sore and tired all over.

"I asked Charley Haughton of the West End A. C., where we clashed, to postpone the scrap for a month, as I had expended a lot of money on advertising, and he would stand for it. That was the sole reason I went down to defeat. I was in poor condition and not at my best.

"I will bet $500 or more that O'Brien can't stop me inside of twenty rounds at 158 ringside. I really don't think he could make that weight, as he is now in a light heavyweight, as is McCoy. If I should get a chance to meet O'Brien again I will surely conquer him."

MIKE "TWIN" IS O. K.

Mike "Twin" is the end of it, and when he goes back to the West with his big brother, he expects to get a match with Joe Gans. At Hereford, the colored man's manage, has partially consented to let his charge meet the Cambridge lightweight. Sully is one of the few white men willing to face Gans, and it should not be difficult for a fast boxer like him to arrange a match.

Mike "Twin" is a great favorite in Frisco, because of his decisive win over Joe Angelo, the foremost Los Angeles lightweight. The latter was sent to the floor in the seventh for the count before that time Angelo was shaking away, but wasn't able to land an effective punch on the Cambridge whirlwind.

COFFROTH TO GET PERMIT

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—Although the an Francisco supervisors have stated that ere will be no fight between Gans and itt at the Shasta Club, Oct. 31, Manager ames Coffroth is confident he will be able secure a permit for the battle. Coff- oth refuses to say how he will get it. oth Gans and Britt have signed articles.

CHARLEY FARRELL OF CHAMPS BROKE INTO GAME IN '87 AND CAUGHT FOR SALEM NINE

How many ball fans realize that Char- ley Farrell, the giant backstop of the Champs, at one period of his career was the fleetest of baserunners and could hold his own with any of the sprinters and run a single into a triple any time?

The Duke has not lost all his speed by any means with his increase in weight, so there are few men, ball players or otherwise, can beat Farrell in the big hesitation.

A player on the diamond has a pair of hands more warped an than Farrell. They look like the branches of a knarled oak, lardy a joint in any finger being straight. When he first broke into the national game in '87 he went behind the bat, as it was the most natural position for him. Then were days when a catcher had no protection, and it was nerve and pluck that made them famous. Farrell had plenty of the right qualifications, and made rapid headway, but his hands had to suffer from the constant work with the wild young ers on the other teams.

It was back in the amateur days that my hands got mashed so as badly before the mit was in use. A catcher's hands in the big league are not likely to suffer much as speed does no damage if it is of the ac- curate kind. Two caught Wm Mercer, Bill Donovan, Joe Meekin ran. Amos Rusie, who was famous for lots of steam, but he was an easy man to receive for as his curve is straight.

In '93 I was with the Senators, then joined New York, staying there in '94-95 and part of '96, going back to Washington in '97. Signed with Brooklyn in '98, and stayed there for 1901 and '02, and then came to Boston. It was in '02 that I quit playing third base, and have wore the mask ever since."

Chancey first saw the light of day at Marietta in 1866 and as soon as he was able to throw a ball his companions knew it.

In 1887 he caught for the Salem team of the New England League and the next year he made his first major league ap- pearance, joining the Chicago team, and made an instantaneous hit. He reunited with Anson till the brotherhood movement got started, when he changed his affili- ations to the Cumakey aggregation. He had a batting average of nearly .300 in his debut in 1890. He was eagerly sought for by the big league teams after that, Cleveland and Pittsburg making bids for him, but Cincinnati secured the prize by offering the largest figures.

His work for the Reds was remarkable, and when the regular third baseman was disabled it was Farrell who was sent to fill the hole, and he acquitted himself so successfully that to almost became a fix- ture there. He could not get reconciled to the new position and remained in Brewer- ville as a result.

He is blessed with the oldest players getter on the diamond to-day, which is conferred on his wonderful physique and always taking the best care of himself. Though long in harness, Farrell is good for many years yet, as he can keep step with any of the kids.

The injury he received to his leg last year would have ended the baseball days of many ball tossers, but his recupera- tive powers came to the front and he is none the worse for the accident that befell him.

Farrell's jovial nature makes him a gen- eral favorite with the baseball profession and he is liked everywhere.

He is regarded as a clever boxer, and there are few who would care to mix it up with him.

SKIN DISEASES

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I was afflicted with Tetter in bad shape. It would appear in blotches as large as my hand, a yellowish color, and scale off. You can imagine how offensive it was. For twelve years I was afflicted with this trouble. At night it was a case of scratch and many times no rest at all. Seeing the good the medicine was doing a friend who was taking it for Eczema, I commenced it, and as a result the eruption began to dry up and disappear, and to-day I am practically a well man. Only two tiny spots are left on the elbow and shin, where once the whole body was affect- ed. I have every confidence in the medicine, and feel sure that in a short time these two remaining spots will dis- appear. S. S. S. is certainly a great blood purifier, and has done me a world of good. I am grateful for what it has accomplished, and trust that what I have said will lead others who are similarly afflicted to take the reme- dy and obtain the same good results that I have.

Training of Girls a Problem

By Lady Henry Somerset

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain rights reserved.

I HAVE heard it said many times that the education of a girl is a much simpler thing than the education of a boy. If instead of "simpler" the words "less expensive" had been substituted, the axiom would be true, but "simpler," certainly not.

Who that has the most elementary idea of psychology does not know that from earliest childhood the depth of a little girl's mind is hard to fathom? You think you have really understood her character; you look into the clear brightness of the blue eyes, and you feel the clasp of the tender little hand, and you believe that you hold the golden key of that child heart; but like a sudden storm on a broad Italian lake is something unseen here in a moment the ruffled the serene calm, and all is changed. You realize that beneath the surface there are storm waves of which you knew nothing, and capabilities of passion of which you had not even dreamed, and the character which you fancied you had grasped proves as elusive as the sunshine of an April day.

With a boy it is different. He is, in nursery parlance, "good" or "naughty." You know where you are. When he confides in you, you are certain that his confidence is genuine. He will not tell you much, but you are almost certain he tells you as much as he knows himself.

If you are obliged to reprove, he listens dry-eyed, perhaps, and gauges carefully the sincerity of your anger; but his sister, after floods of tears, has criticised your attitude a thousand times in her own mind, has put her little pink finger on the weakness of your position, and has realized with a certain inward satisfaction that it hurt you to find fault, and, therefore, she does not suffer alone. She has reconsidered the whole position and settled how to meet you in a future combat.

It is on account of the extreme dissimilarity of character so early shown by boys and girls that the whole question of their education is necessarily complicated. But the girl's empire does not last long; the crown and sceptre are soon laid aside. As frocks lengthen and the streaming hair is tied back, a new regime begins.

Bob has gone to school. Before he went he was only a boy, whose head she might punch with impunity, and who, if retaliation were resorted to, would have been punished at once for rudeness to his sister. But the schoolboy returns with the supreme contempt for girls which is donned with the Eton collar and the first hair of manhood. The whole scene changes. Bob allows his sister occasionally to share his pleasures, but it is on sufferance.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET.

The relative position of the girl to the boy has much to do with the plan of life of woman. The girl never hesitates as to the justice of the conditions which make it right that the boy should have advantages which she cannot even no longer be climbed together, hope to share, or money to spend in her own right she can never possess. In the last generation girls were probably more rooted in this belief than to-day. The education considered sufficient for a girl of good position twenty years ago would not satisfy the requirements of a Board School to-day.

When a child left the nursery she was handed over to the care of a governess, who was supposed to be able to teach all branches of learning. It makes us shiver to remember how vast was supposed to be the erudition of this one woman, who could teach at least three languages, music and singing, history and mathematics, and who was expected, moreover, to be cheerful and good-tempered out of lesson hours, an interesting playmate for little children and by and by a companion for older girls.

A healthy-minded girl in her schoolroom days has no sentiment other than friendly comradeship for her brother's boy friends. The love of admiration for which was evident in earlier years has been smothered for a time, and she would be ashamed even to admit that she cared how she looked or what she wore.

But as the years advance, when trees when my cap no longer hangs on my den astride in the paddock, and when the first evening frock has proclaimed the dawn of young womanhood, the scene changes. The girl becomes silent and shy. She delights in stories that would disgust her brother, who would loudly pronounce them "rot."

The difference between the relations of boy and girl in America has largely reversed the stages by which in this phase is arrived at. The reverence in which womanhood is held affects the boy from his earliest years; and, while American boys and their sisters are equally comrades during the earlier years, the deference shown to woman is to be found in their intercourse as markedly then as thereafter.

The conception that woman was made for man, as the equal of man, not as his partner in the Divine life, but as his companion-servant, deriving her existence from his and answerable only to minister to his pleasure, has been too long the heritage, especially of Protestant nations. It has moulded the life in England, in all classes of society. To what extent I think it has especially affected the English girl, I will endeavor to explain later.

MARRIED to MYSTERY

Boston American's Thrilling Story of Present-Day Life in Boston

The servant made no movement beyond turning his head to Mrs. Pangbourne, as if questioning her will.

"Do you understand me?"

"You will do nothing of the sort, Benson," said Violet shortly.

"No, my lady."

"Turn him out—turn him out," shrieked the frenzied master of the house. "Have I no control? Will no one obey me?"

"You see that you have no control. And now what do you say?" Violet stood before him aggressively, as if inviting a blow.

"Shall I go, madam?" asked Benson with unchanged expression.

"No, wait." She turned once more to her husband. "What do you say?" she repeated.

"I say," he panted, "that you are a bad, wicked woman. You have made my life a hell. Do what you like. You have never given me love—not even esteem. I'll have no more of you. I'll go to some one who cares for me—yes, who will give me the love you have denied me. I know it—I know it!"—he burst into a hysterical laugh—"you say that I love no one—that I am unloved—uncared for. I'm not—I'm not—it is a lie. See for yourself!" With trembling fingers he tore Lilian's letter from his pocket and threw it at his wife's feet. "See—read!" he screamed. "You who say I am unloved. What do I care? I'll go to her who wrote me that letter. She says, 'If you are in sorrow or in trouble, come.' And what she says she means—oh, I know her. She is an angel, and you—you are a fiend from hell—"

"You hear all this, Benson?" Violet stooped and picked up the letter, which she carefully thrust into her bosom of her dress.

"Yes, madam."

"What do I care if he hears? What do I care for anything? I tell you what I am going to do. I will not stay another minute with you. I'll go to her. You—you viper!" Words failed him, and he gasped brokenly.

"Go—and find comfort with your"——Violet did not finish the sentence, for her husband raised his hand threateningly.

"Be silent, woman!"

"I won't. I shall say it if it's the truth," she cried. She was acting a part, doing her utmost to force her husband to a blow. "Strike me if you like; you are brute enough. You have always been a brute to me." This was for the edification of the footman. "Go to your——"

The desired blow fell. Pangbourne struck out awkwardly with his open hand. Mrs. Pangbourne's cheek was red, and she began to cry; forced though they were the tears came readily.

"You brute—you brute," she sobbed as she sank down on the sofa.

He had struck a woman, and that woman his wife. Pangbourne began to mutter excuses.

"I didn't mean——" he began.

"Go—your presence is hateful—it makes me ill."

"Violet—I——"

"Go—go!" Violet felt that these indications of remorse must not be encouraged. They were natural to her husband's weak nature. She would have preferred him to have repeated the blow.

He stole from the room like a beaten cur. On the stairs he slipped and nearly fell. He was at a loss what he should really do.

"Of course, I must come back," he muttered to himself. "It is my own house—my own money." He could not fully understand the possibility of a refusal by his wife to continue the supplies which she had doled out to him. "I gave it her first," was with him an indisputable argument.

For a moment he was inclined to return to the drawing room, but his natural timidity prevented him from doing this. "I must go out," he told himself, "if only for a little while. I'll go and see Lilian—she will advise me. If you are in sorrow or in trouble, come,' she wrote to me—bless her. And I am in trouble."

He sighed plaintively and sought in his pocket for Lilian's letter. Not finding it there, he remembered how it had passed into his wife's possession.

A dim conception of the folly of his action came upon him, and he tugged nervously at his beard. "I had no right to do it," he muttered; "it was a private letter—to me—and I have betrayed my trust. I must get it back—and—and—I will tell my wife that I am sorry I struck her."

He rose as if to go at once, but stopped, vacillating once more. That man George Tweedham was there, and he could not meet him. No—to-morrow—tomorrow—he would do nothing till the morrow. He sank down in his chair and rocked to and fro in weak despair.

Suddenly he heard the door of the drawing room opened and the footman in the hall. He could not meet them now. Hurriedly he rose, and, softly opening the door in the hall, made for the front door. He shut it behind him without noise. Then he forced he felt in his pocket to ascertain that he had not forgotten his letter.

Chapter LXV.

How the Search Ended.

"GIVEN from my own home," Pangbourne muttered to himself as he slunk away.

As soon as the drawing room door had closed behind her husband Violet sprang to her feet. Her face was still flushed and the cheek which her husband had struck bore the imprint of his fingers. A heavy signet ring which the man had been wearing had cut the flesh, and there was a trace of blood round the margin of the little wound.

"You saw—and heard, Benson?" She had now to secure the services of the man servant as a valuable witness.

"Yes, madam."

"You understand that I shall institute proceedings for divorce against my husband, and that you will be subpœnaed to appear at the trial?"

"Yes, madam."

"THE BURGLAR AND THE CHILD."

This touching new song will be given away free with next Sunday's great BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

WHEN MRS. HAMMER AND MRS. CROWBAR MEET

1. MRS. HAMMER—Oh, joy! Here comes Mrs. Crowbar. I'll wager she will feel sick to see me with my new Fall hat on and she still wearing her Summer one.

2. MRS. HAMMER—Why, how are you, dear? What is the matter with you and Dear Ferdie? He has rung to call Summer hats in. (Aside) That was a cut.

MRS. CROWBAR—Dear me! Mrs. Hammer with her Fall hat. Now just watch her crow over me.

MRS. CROWBAR—Well, you see, my milliner is so awfully busy she was compelled to disappoint me.

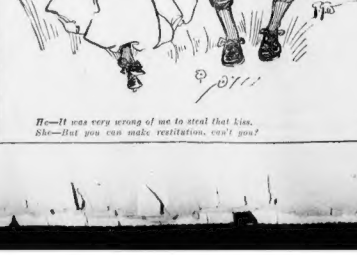
3. MRS. HAMMER—How sad! MY milliner is so glad to get MY trade he wouldn't dare to disappoint ME. How do I look in it, dear?

MRS. CROWBAR (Aside)—Now I will give her one back for saying that. Lovely, dear. It makes you look THIRTY YEARS YOUNGER.

4. MRS. HAMMER—THIRTY YEARS YOUNGER! That's a downright insult! That's as much as to insinuate I am fifty-five or sixty years old. She's a hateful scratch!

MRS. CROWBAR—She'll not crow much after THAT!

CAN RIGHT THE WRONG



He—It was very wrong of me to steal that kiss.
She—But you can make restitution, can't you?

HAS THE SMOKER A RIGHT TO BE A PUBLIC FUMIGATOR?

"E. B. H." of Providence, R. I., in a recent issue of the BOSTON AMERICAN, finds it amusing to read editorials criticising the smoker. He claims that tobacco smoke is a germ destroyer, and says it is more wholesome on the parlor in the vicinity of the smoker than to the smoker himself. I believe he is right, and am reminded by this view of the case of the boy's composition on "Pins."

The boy had made the statement in his composition that pins often saved people's lives, and the incredulous teacher had asked how this could be. The boy's ready answer was, "By not swallowing them."

Now in the case of the smoker and the "nearbys," the "nearbys" do probably swallow a little less smoke than the smoker and so, as "E. B. H." puts it, it is more wholesome for them.

In justice to my friend I will try for a moment to look at smoking from his point of view. He shall be considered as he desires to be, a public benefactor, who, passing through our crowded thoroughfares, pufts industriously, laboriously and painstakingly, if you will, right and left wherever the unwary germ may be lurking on the person or the clothing of the "nearbys," and I will try to remember that as he is performing his self-appointed task as fumigator, doing the heavy work as it were, he himself is deriving but comparatively little benefit from it. Also that such self-sacrifice should be duly appreciated by the non-smoker, who, according to our friend's version, is deriving most of the benefit. But is it not strange, non-smokers look upon it in a different light.

We non-smokers indignantly resent the smoker's attempt, and deny his right to fumigate us. We claim the inalienable right of breathing purely air that is free to will and pleasure, remembering always to respect the rights of others, and if you, Mr. Smoker, can discover nothing ruder, or ill-mannered than our insistence on not getting your friends whenever your tobacco appetite needs to be appeased, you certainly need an eye-opener.

PRESIDENT ELIOT'S DEFINITION OF "A GENTLEMAN" CRITICIZED.

President Eliot recently addressed a body of students on "The Gentleman," and among many good things he said was: "The ideal gentleman must be a worker, an organizer and a distinguished laborer in the service of others."

For one, I wish he had specified the fields in which he thought the ideal gentleman should be an organizer, and whether between "superiors" and "inferiors," and he should organize the citizens industrially to divide a democracy more and more into classes?

How can the ideal gentleman "wish to associate with his superiors rather than his inferiors," and at the same time "be a distinguished laborer in the service of others"? "Others" cannot mean "superiors" for they do not need his services. He needs their services, just as his "inferiors" need his. Is it really more blessed to receive than to give?

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a friend who some time ago met a young lady in whom he became very much interested. The young lady invited me to come for him before she went out of town. Some time after that while away on a visit I met a young man whom she kept company with some years ago. Her old love letters were returned to her and she dropped the love she had for my friend. He talked the matter over with her and she told him she had met another fellow before she had known him. My friend told her he was willing to take the second place. She refused him and asked me if I thought he was doing the right thing after she had told him the way she had. He tells me he does not like to be second fiddle. He is not faint hearted. He can stick at a thing a good while, but he wants to be considered somewhat fickle. She wants to keep up his acquaintance, but she does not seem to love him at all, and treats him coldly. Does my friend do right? Let me know what you think about this matter so I may know how to advise him?

F. M.

OF course if your friend chooses to keep on with his attentions in spite of coldness and rebuff he is at liberty to do so, but if I were he I would give up the chase. The girl says she does not love him, and that she does love the other man. Human love is not the growth of human will, you know, and she cannot help it if she loves the other man better. It may be that she is fickle. In that case all the better why he should give her up. She will be true time to no one.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-one years of age, and while away on my vacation I met a young lady whom I greatly fell in love with. Now, Miss Fairfax, what I want to know is this: She gave me her address in an offhand way, never asking me to call and I have not. Would it be proper for me to write and ask her permission to call? As she is just the style of girl I have been looking for I would like to keep up the acquaintance, but as there was no other way I could suggest to novel plan.

HEARTBROKEN.

IT would be perfectly proper. Write to her and ask if you may call; that will give her an opportunity to refuse if she does not care to continue the friendship. I think that is the only polite way of renewing your acquaintance.

NEW WAYS FOR GIRLS TO MAKE MONEY.

These will be described in next Sunday's great BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN in a way that will interest every woman reader of this page.

ANIMALS, AS WELL AS MEN, ARE IMMORTAL, AND CHILDREN SHOULD TREAT THEM KINDLY

Copyright, 1904, by American-Journal-Examiner.

A BOOK has been published recently concerning Immortality of animals. It is curious to note the shocked expression on the face of some conventionally orthodox people when the possibility of future life for animals is mentioned, yet there seems to be an abundance of belief that animals do exist after they leave the earth plane.

George Eliot, in "Middlemarch," says: "I like to think that the animals about us have souls something like our own."

Orlando J. Smith, in "Eternalism," says: "The theological theory that animals are soulless is plainly untenable. If man be immortal, all other forms of life must also be immortal."

Socrates admitted the immortality of all animal life.

Solomon says of man and the lower animals: "They have all one breath, so that man has no pre-eminence over a beast."

In the Book of Revelation St. John says he saw not only elders about the throne, but beasts.

St. Paul says in unequivocal terms that the whole creation which now groan in pain shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. It seems impossible to empty these words of their plain significance.

Canon Wilberforce expressed the opinion that "in the great eternal world men and animals sink or swim together."

Mrs. Mary Somerville says: "I firmly believe that the living principle is never extinguished. I am sincerely happy to find that I am not the only believer in the immortality of animals."

The Rev. J. G. Wood says: "I feel sure that they will have the opportunity of developing their latent faculties in the next world."

Canon Carter declares: "The lower animals are not to be destroyed, but, after their manner, accorded a higher kind, will be restored."

Professor Louis Agassiz said: "In some incomprehensible way, God Almighty has created these beings, and I cannot doubt that they will exist any more than I can doubt of my own."

It is not to be supposed that the animal occupies in the spiritual world a position which places him on an equality with that of the spiritually developed man, but it can only bring joy to the heart of every right-thinking human being to believe that the poor misused, neglected and over-taxed dumb creatures of earth have a little chance of something better when they leave their worn-out bodies. To my own thinking I am confident that many a cruel, selfish and inconsiderate man will find himself in the life to come somewhat below that of the loving, faithful and devoted animals of the earth, and the tender-hearted woman asked me the other day why I did not make a protest against the exhibition of trained animals.

She said: "All trained animals are kept in cages and deprived of their natural freedom and natural conditions necessary to comfort and happiness. They are often treated harshly and taught by cruel methods to perform their tricks, which entirely outrages and kill their owner's purses."

All this I know to be in the main true, but while every city boasts of its zoo, where similar conditions exist, it is useless to start a crusade against the training of animals.

Some time I believe civilization will have reached a point where no wild beast or bird will be kept in cage or pens.

Now that we have turned our backs upon the Summer and are facing all other Winter, it would be well for the several animal protective societies to plan their Winter campaign against cruelty and neglect. They ought to be making organized effort to introduce humane education in the public schools.

It is only with the educating of cruelty out of the minds of children (for almost all children are by nature thoughtlessly cruel) that we can hope to make any permanent improvement in the conditions existing to-day. I would suggest to these societies that they begin at once to bring about the introduction of the humane education in other schools as has been done in Boston, Philadelphia, with splendid success and with a notable decrease of cruelty.

New York is always behind all other cities in any great progressive movement, but it is to be hoped that the new animal protective societies will not permit it to be negligent longer this important work.

Mr. J. I. Burtt, of Nissinoming, Pa., sends me a pathetic letter, saying:

I visit ninety-eight towns every two weeks and New York is the only city in which I see horses drawing street cars. My heart aches every time I see one.

I have read in a respectable serial that they are brought fresh from the prairies, are immediately put to work and in two years are dead.

I would rather throw my money into the Hudson River than invest it in horse-car service.

Educate children to think of the things.

Beginning Life Right

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

THE other day a young couple out in Evanston, Ill., made up their minds to run away and be married in Colorado Springs.

It was a captivating idea, and the more they thought of it the more cruel it seemed to them not to take into the pleasant secret the bride's dearest friend.

The dearest friend was informed of the lovers' scheme, and she didn't enthuse worth a cent. The plan was a very pretty one, "romantic," "poetical" and all that, but it was evident that the dearest friend did not like it.

The dearest friend told the secret to the girl's father, who immediately resolved himself into a committee of one, whose business it was to hold a conference with the would-be elopers.

And this is what he said to them:

"Now, see here, I am not opposed to your getting married, but I am opposed to the idea of your running away to be married. The place for my daughter to be wedded is in her father's house. What do you think of it?"

There was no answering an argument like that, and instead of running away, like thieves in the night, to be wedded in a strange land, the young couple were married at home, going afterward to Colorado Springs for their honeymoon.

How much better that was than it would have been to elope, and to begin their married life with a joke!

As it was, the young couple began right and a good beginning is half the battle.

Marriage is no serious and sacred matter to be trifled with. It is no affair for jokes and pranks.

If the girl at the above all others is a lifes when we need to be supremely thoughtful, earnest and dignified. It is when we stand up to be married.

The person who does not feel the importance and bearing of what I have said must be to stand by at the marriage altar.

It may be said: "Oh, that's all right, but it does no harm to have a little fun—I mean sport in getting married."

But it does do harm to make fun of so binding [illegible] and of the [illegible] in this world there is nothing so sacred as marriage.

Begin married life right, then, and there will be little or no trouble at home—you have one.

Get married under the roof-tree where father and mother dwell, if they are alive, in the land of the living.

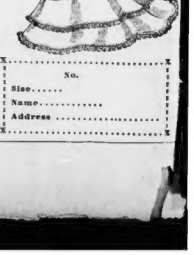
HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN

Ladies' Corset Cover and Petticoat



Nos. 6050, 6051—In the dainty design shown here we have a simple little model that is recommended as to being the best of the goods under the arm and over the hips, with only enough fullness at the waist to allow a moderate fulness over the skirt. The corset cover has a fine flat waist and the waist edge is tight fitting, except for a few plaits in the front. The only seam in the garment is on the shoulders. The model, as one can readily see, has especially good lines, the bias of the goods under the arm insuring a perfect fit, and rendering the garment easy to put on. The matter of trimming is optional; the pattern is suitable for feminine use, which may be as elaborately trimmed, according to one's taste. The style illustrated is very much in vogue at present time.

In these days no one thinks of putting a lining in a skirt; a deep skirt or petticoat skirt is used instead; not the petticoat with ruffles and frills, but a petticoat which fits smoothly under the dress, and which has instead of ruffles, corset cover embroidery, or lace, or a deep flounce, and which may be of linen or percaline. The design shown has been made especially for the new full skirts, and is deep and long; not necessarily tight, but close to the figure. This style skirt may be made of lawn, muslin or silk, taken over any material suitable for a petticoat or drop skirt. The pattern provides for a medium sweep or round length.

Size 6050 requires for corset cover, in medium size, 1 yard, 36 inches wide. For petticoat, 2½ yards, 36 inches wide.

Sizes for corset cover, 6050: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure.

Sizes for petticoat, 6051: 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34 and 36 inches waist measure.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail either of the above patterns upon receipt of 10 cents for each number wanted. Be sure to write plainly and state number and size desired.

All send should be addressed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 220, Boston, Mass.

NEWS OF THE THEATRES

Tremont Theatre.

To-night Nance O'Neil will present for the first time Thomas Bailey Aldrich's play, "Judith of Bethulia." The occasion will be one of great interest. Mr. Aldrich's standing in the world of literature is of the highest, and there is every reason to believe that he has provided Miss O'Neil with a role which will afford her splendid opportunities for the display of her abilities. She gave a remarkable performance in the version of the story of Judith and Holofernes, which she used last season, but the play was glossed and the part was entirely destitute of any sympathetic quality.

In Mr. Aldrich's version, it is said, Judith is made a woman of noble and sympathetic character, who carries out what she believes to be her mission, accompanied only by the highest and noblest purposes. A handsome and elaborate production of the play is promised.

Majestic Theatre.

"The Shepherd King" is still drawing immense audiences to the Majestic Theatre and seems certain to continue doing so for the balance of the engagement. This beautiful rendition of the old Biblical story of David has scored a great success and also has attracted the attention and won the appreciation not only of the theatre goers, but also of those to whom the story told by the Bible is of the greatest interest. Play and performance are both deserving of praise, while the production is as fine a one as the stage has seen.

Boston Theatre

Only four chances are left to see "The Wizard of Oz" at the Boston Theatre, as the last performance will be given here on Saturday night. This has proved one of the most successful attractions that has ever appeared at this house and on many occasions the gallery has been packed to overflow this immense theatre. It has won its way to favor by its delightful music, attractive music and the gorgeousness of the production. It is said that the rest of Fred Ramlin's tour, "but there are many who will be sorry to say goodbye to the scarecrow and the tin woodman.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"The Girl from Kay's" is nearly ready to leave the Hollis Street, and only four more performances of this bright musical event are to be given here. It has given delight to a great people during its long stay and could probably play to good houses for much longer time, but Mr. Woodward has scored a hit in the role of Hogenheimer, and Hattie Williams and several others of the company have won popularity that will insure them a welcome when they come again.

Globe Theatre.

"Captain Barrington" has proved the most popular attraction of the season so far at the Globe Theatre, and is filling the house at every performance. The new star, William Bramwell, has made a decidedly good impression and will be able to consider himself a Boston favorite in future. He is a manly and earnest actor and plays the three roles that fall to his lot in a fashion that evidences much versatility. His support is excellent and the play is handsomely and effectively staged.

Park Theatre.

"The Other Girl" is becoming more popular every week at the Park Theatre, and is being given to a succession of crowded houses. It is one of the best and cleanest of the comedies that has been given here in many a day, and is played with a spirit and vim that adds to the full its delightful humor. It is a thoroughly enjoyable play, and is finely presented in spirit and fact. Lionel Barrymore's performance of the professor of physics at college is an extremely clever characterization.

Colonial Theatre.

Fay Templeton and Peter F. Dailey are creating a great deal of fun in "A Little of Everything" at the Colonial, but the engagement is nearly at an end, and the last performance will be given Saturday night. Both Miss Templeton and Mr. Dailey are great favorites here, and are always sure of pleasing their audiences. The former is one of the cleverest of American comedienne, and her selection of songs is the most entertaining one of the most entertaining things she has ever done.

Grand Opera House.

"The Volunteer Organist" has made a big hit with the patrons of the Grand opera House, and the theatre has been crowded at every performance. It is a strong and stirring melodrama of country life in northern New York, and is presented with many realistic scenes, one of them being an ice gorge, and a thoroughly realistic storm. The company appearing in the play is an excellent one, and a good performance is given.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Soldiers of Fortune" has proved one of the most attractive offerings that the Castle Square has put forward in a long time, and large audiences have been the rule every afternoon and evening. It is an enjoyable play and an interesting one, and presents a number of clever character types. It is well played by the members of the stock company. Lillian Kemble and Howell Hansel in particular winning much favor.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"Midnight in Chinatown" is drawing big audiences to the Bowdoin Square Theatre. It is a melodrama of the most thrilling type, and holds the attention of the audience from beginning to end. It is full of exciting scenes and situations, and strongly enlists the sympathies of those who see the play. It is well mounted, and the members of the company do good work.

Howard Athenaeum.

One of the best vaudeville bills that the Howard has offered in a long time is pleasing the patrons of that house this week. "This and That" is the title of the new burlesque, and the principal valuable acts are those of George H. Wood, Clayton Kennedy and Mattie Rooney, Joe and Sadie Britton, La Velie and Grant, the Yamamoto Japs, the Gregoros, Manning and Long, and Castle and Collins.

Columbia Music Hall.

Much interest is already felt in the reopening of the Columbia, or the Columbia Music Hall, which is to occupy Scollay Square. A company of clever people will appear in the Weber & Field's burlesque, "Whoop-de-Doo," and there will be an attractive vaudeville bill in addition. Daily matinee performances will be given and smoking will be permitted except in the orchestra chairs.

Palace Theatre.

The Utopian Burlesquers are giving a very popular show at the Palace Theatre this week and are providing a form of entertainment that suits the taste of the patrons of the house to a T. The burlesque, which is entitled, "Broke and Broken" and "The Yellow Dog," and the olio is a good one.

Lyceum Theatre.

The Morning Glories have made a hit with the patrons of the Lyceum and are filling the house at every performance. Their entertainment, "Under the Old Apple Tree," is an entertaining concection, and it is presented in a fashion that pleases everyone. The comedians are amusing and the girls are pretty and handsomely costumed.

Austin & Stone's Museum.

Dr. Johnson has proved a great attraction at Austin & Stone's Museum and has created a great deal of astonishment by his feat of drinking a bucket of water for fifteen days. There are other interesting and attractive features as well and the show as a whole is one of the best that has been provided at this resort in some time.

Nickelodeon.

Hartford and Davis's Sonbrettes' Convention is still drawing the patrons of the Nickelodeon. The bill this week is a strong one, the principal other features being McKnight, the hoopdingist, Cohen and Clark, the Jugglers, and the King of the Wire.

Amusement Notes.

Henry W. Savage's production of "Parsifal," in English, at the Tremont Theatre next week, promises to be one of the most notable features of the theatrical season. The cast is one of the strongest that has high rank, and it is promised that the presentation will be one of the finest ever given in Boston.

Andrew Mack will come to the Boston Theatre next Monday in "The Way to Kenmare." Mr. Mack is a great favorite with Boston theatre-goers, and his new play is said to be one of the best vehicles for the display of his talents he has ever had. He has a number of new songs which promise to become popular.

Grace Van Studdiford will make her appearance at the Hollis Street Theatre in "The Red Feather," a comic opera which will be produced here under the direction of Miss Van Studdiford was well liked here as a member of the Bostonians and will receive a cordial welcome.

"When Johnny Comes Marching Home," the popular Stange and Edwards comic opera, will be next week's attraction at the Globe. The piece has been presented in previous visits and will be given the same handsome production.

Marcel's flying art studies will form the principal attraction at Keith's Theatre next week. They are said to be very cleverly put on and to comprise some beautiful posings.

"Happy Hooligan," one of the most popular of farces, will be seen at the Grand Opera House next week. The funmakers will be George Melville, James J. Collins, James E. Leonard, Cummins and Clare, and Miss Mabel Conway.

"The Heartette" will be revived by the stock company at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

Next week's attraction at the Bowdoin Square Theatre will be "The Black Hand."

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most powerful disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it is whitening to the skin and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a most pronounced fashion of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat: I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

Why Railroads Are Doing Record-Breaking Killings

The Trusts Killed Competition and Are Now Killing the Passengers

More people were killed and injured on American railroads up to October 1, 1904, than were killed and injured on the same railroads during the same months of 1903.

More people were killed and injured on American railroads in 1903 than were killed and injured in 1902.

Last year 9,984 were killed and 78,287 were injured on American railroads.

Four years ago 7,865 were killed and nine times as many were injured.

In 1896 the number killed was 5,485 and the injured were nine times as many as these.

Six years ago Congress passed laws compelling the use of automatic couplers and the airbrake was put on freight trains. In spite of this the death list grows.

Mile for mile we kill and injure ten times more people than they do on the railroads of France, Germany and England.

The American railroad death list has grown enormously and out of all proportion to increase of travel within four years.

Four years ago the railroads of the country began to form in groups, and two years ago the map of the United States was cut up in sections and the railroads in each group were placed under one control. That was the "community of interest" scheme that Messrs. Morgan, Hill and others evolved. It did away with "ruinous competition," and the shallow-pated understrappers delivered themselves of great chunks of wisdom on the splendid things that would come from this. You heard it from the after-dinner orator.

The community of interests plan was abandoned for the quicker and surer game of the trust, which, not content with stopping ruinous competition, killed competition.

WITH THE GROWTH AND PERFECTION OF TRUST RULE IN AMERICAN RAILROADS THE LIST OF KILLED AND WOUNDED PASSENGERS AND EMPLOYES GREW.

There is no penalty in loss of business now for letting the road become unsafe. One line may lose business, but the same people own the parallel line, and the money goes into the same hopper.

The other day thirty or forty people were killed on the Southern Railway near Knoxville, Tenn. You can't go to Knoxville or Chattanooga now from New York without using the Southern's line. Once it was different.

If you want to go to Washington and are not well treated on the Pennsylvania and take the Baltimore & Ohio you pay your money to the same owners.

If you hear that the Union Pacific is not giving good service and decide to go to San Francisco by the Southern Pacific you pay the fare to the same trust, for the Union Pacific crowd owns the Southern Pacific.

Fifteen years ago there was an awful wreck on a railroad running from St. Louis to Indianapolis. The loss of life was due to neglect of the railroad management. The road so suffered from loss of business to competing lines because of the advertising of its lack of safety that it went into a receiver's hands.

Now the favor or frown of the public counts for nothing. There is no competition.

If you go from one road to another you patronize the same trust under another name.

Old man Vanderbilt's public be d——d policy is out of date. The Trust has gone him one better by abolishing the public as a free agent.

Because there is a competition-killing railroad trust there is the increased loss of life on American railroads. The trust has destroyed the penalty for accident. The passenger must travel over its lines or walk. It is cheaper to have the accidents than to pay for the safeguards.

The favor of the public no longer counts. Ability to travel by a competing line is taken from him, and if the rush for dividends by cheapening the cost of hauling him crushes him to death the next passenger need not change his ticket to a parallel line. The same forces that neglected to bring the dead passenger through control the other road.

THIS IS HOW THE RAILROAD TRUST IS DOING YOU. WHEN IT KILLED COMPETITION IT BEGAN KILLING PASSENGERS.

When the Law Always Wins

Al Adams Knows That It Is Dangerous When Backed by Public Sentiment

Al Adams is out of the penitentiary. His sentence was short, and for good behavior he got the usual legal allowance.

Al Adams was a good prisoner—maybe he will hereafter conclude to be a model citizen. Even at his time of life there is a chance for Adams to do a lot of good, and when the time comes for him to die he can look back at some acts of charity toward his fellows.

Adams served a good purpose as a prisoner. He had made millions out of a mean form of gambling. He thought his money could keep him from the lash of the law. He employed great lawyers, made a hard fight, but the law was backed by public opinion, and he lost.

And whenever the law is backed by an aroused public sentiment against those who defy it the law always wins.

Adams is an object lesson to those who think the law can be beaten all the time with money. He got a light sentence, but, light as it was, it served as a splendid warning to those who would thrive and fatten off the misfortunes or cupidity of their foolish fellows.

WANTS A NEW CUSTOM HOUSE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Can't something be done to urge on more rapidly the movement for a new Custom House for Boston? It seems to me that the commercial interests of this great port have been sadly neglected in the past in allowing the present Custom House, so inadequate and so out of date, to remain standing. Our representatives at Washington should bestir themselves.

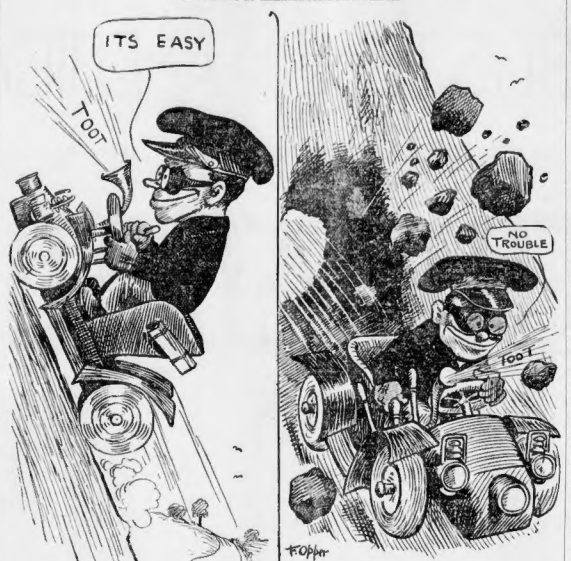
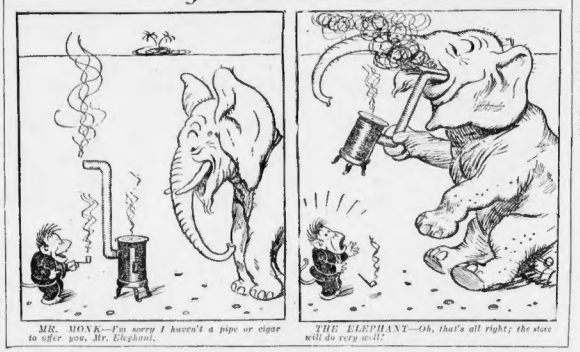
JOYOUS JINGLES FOR MOTORISTS

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY AMERICAN JOURNAL-EXAMINER.



A fearless young chauffeur named Bill
Could climb any sort of a hill;
And perhaps it seems strange,
But sometimes, for a change,
He'd go through, with the greatest of skill.

IN JUNGLE SOCIETY.



MR. MONK—I'm sorry I haven't a pipe or cigar to offer you, Mr. Elephant.

THE ELEPHANT—Oh, that's all right; the store will do very well!

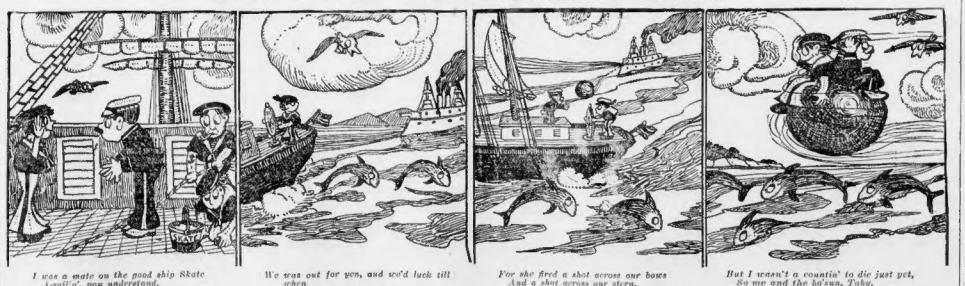
Which one of us is yer goin' ter gib de apple to, Johnnie? I'm goin' ter eat it meself.

'Scuse me, mum, but did you lote er kid?

NOW WHAT D'YE THINK OF THAT!



I was a mate on the good ship Skate A-sailin', you understand. (Though this must be on the strict Q. T.). With a cargo of contraband.

We was out for yen, and we'd luck till when We sighted a Russian cruiser; Then I seen at a glance that we hadn't a chance And I knowed that we couldn't lose her.

For she fired a shot across our bows And a shot across our stern, And our skipper, bein' a fightin' man, He fired a shot crost hern.

But I wasn't a countin' to die just yet, So me and the bo'sun, Toby, We rode to shore on a cannon-ball, Which landed us safe at Kobe.

MR. MARTYR

HE LIGHTS THE FIRE | THE FURNACE AND THE FIREMEN BREAK | THE FRONT DOOR

BOY on earth don't you light the fire in the furnace, Mrs. Martyr? Do you want the entire family to catch their deaths of cold?

I should think that when the temperature goes down to thirty and the bathroom floor feels like a skating rink, it might occur to you that a little heat is needed, but no, you gather your children together around a gas stove in the parlor and heat them red hot, and then, of course, every time they go into any other part of the house they run the risk of getting quick consumption.

I told you to light the furnace fire when I started for town this morning. Every time I get out of bed to shut the windows last night my feet shrivelled up like sensitive plants when they hit the floor, and the draughts that went shooting around the house gave me convulsive chills.

I mentioned these things to you, you remember, and suggested that they could be prevented.

No, don't tell me what you did. I know you didn't light the fire, because the house is as cold as the north side of the North Pole, and it's had the sun shining on it all the afternoon at that.

Out of order? Foolishness! The furnace wasn't out of order last spring when the fire went out; why should it be out of order now?

I suppose I am wasting my time in talking to you, however. I might as well go downstairs and start the fire myself.

Of course it's dark in the cellar, and there's no kindling wood. Well, here's an old chair that is no good. I'll split that up.

Bang! I guess that won't be kicking around for a while. Into the furnace with it!

What! Well, why didn't you say it was an antique mahogany chair? What was it doing down cellar? I brought it down here to varnish? Well, you should have told me. There's $25 gone to smithereens because of your carelessness. Oh, no; there's no use of taking it out. It's gone now.

I tell you, Mrs. Martyr, there's nothing you can say that will dissuade me from building this fire, so you might as well go upstairs and let me alone.

There! It's roaring! Leak? Why should it leak? Oh, you merely imagine you smell smoke. In a minute the whole house will be as warm as toast and you will be rising up and calling me blessed because I thought of building the fire.

Don't keep everlastingly worrying about that smell. It's only the odor of the blacking on the pipe, I tell you. Furnaces always smell that way when you first light them.

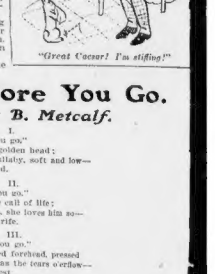
What's that coming up through the carpet? It looks like fog. Smoke! Where could smoke come from?

Great Caesar! I'm stifling! Wait till I run down cellar and see what's the matter.

Well, upon my word, Mrs. Martyr, this furnace hasn't any pipe to the chimney, and the cellar's so full of smoke you can't see across it.

What's that bell ringing outside of the house and all that yelling? The fire department, hey? Attracted by the smoke, I suppose?

Listen! They're smashing in the front door with an axe. I expected it, Mrs. Martyr, your carelessness is enough to drive a man to suicide in a week, and if I were not the most patient mortal in the world I should have blown my brains out years ago.



"Great Caesar! I'm stifling!"

A Kiss Before You Go.

By Harry B. Metcalf.

I.

"A kiss before you go,"
The toss of a golden head;
The notes of a lullaby, soft and low—
And away to bed.

II.

"A kiss before you go,"
A youth at the call of life;
A sigh and a sob, she loves him so—
And away to strife.

III.

"A kiss before you go,"
And a wrinkled forehead, pressed
By devoted lips as the tears overflow—
And away to rest.

Little Editorials from the People

HERE is an open forum for a full and free discussion of any timely question. Letters from BOSTON AMERICAN readers are cordially welcomed. If you have an opinion to express, say so. If you wish to enter a protest, do so. To insure speedy publication, letters should be brief, say two hundred words.

A CRITIC OF THE UNIVERSE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

A few weeks ago I wrote a few lines on the absurdity of rats being created for cats. "Reader" from Quincy replies and states that birds were also created for cats. "Reader" forgot to mention that missionaries were made for cannibals, but declares that the obnoxious things occur so that we may become educated and abolish them.

Now this earth according to scientists has been whirling through space for millions of years and this torture has been going on all that time. No human being who was intelligent and had a good heart would plan things in such a manner. I am willing to give divine wisdom the credit, as it is certainly consistent with divine justice I have read about.

Miss Ella Wheeler Wilcox says that there is a design in nature. Can she or any one else prove it? It seems to me that nature causes about as much misery as happiness. Lightning seems to strike the just as well as the unjust. Seeing things as I do I am forced to class myself as an infidel. I neither give thanks for good nor curses for ill. In order to bring more happiness on this earth I favor the people organizing themselves into a co-operative society. The earth being able to properly sustain at least ten times its present population we could then live without compelling Christians to kill each other.

Lawrence, Mass. EQUALITY.

ANOTHER PLAN FOR PUNISHING GENERAL BELL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Mr. Winslow, of Lynn, advocates a monster petition to bring about the punishment of General Bell for his crimes against the miners of Colorado. A petition has weight only where the petitioners are voters. The voters of Colorado are in a position to be coerced by this Bell, who serves the hand that feeds him (the money power of the country).

When the workingmen of this country stand shoulder to shoulder, with a common interest and a common purpose, they can put men into public office who will be governed by the wishes of the voters.

The State of Colorado could be practically disfranchised by our national government if the voters in other states, having selected the right men for Senators and Representatives, instructed them to withhold all measures presented by the members from Colorado. She could not get recognition in the legislative assemblies, neither could she get appropriations for government work. The government troops could be withdrawn and posts abandoned. There would be no extensions of mail routes, and a curtailment of the government's expenditures in the State would be sufficient to retire to private life even the mighty General Bell.

Everett, Mass. JOHN BUCKLEY.
